Port Townsend is a popular destination worth the challenge of discovery on Washington's Olympic Peninsula. The challenge for visitors is to decipher the Department of Transportation's shell game of "Guess How to Get There," with a missing bridge, a rotating fleet of substitute ferries and a Striker Brigade of Buses.

Code breakers must unravel clues from floating highways, a floatilla of ferries and parade of buses. The Secret of Discovery is in the timing.

This page on PTFerry.com displays the most complete and up-to-date schedules in one place to show travelers "How to Get There" on a car ferry before it goes into dry dock, on a New Year's passenger ferry and on Washington Ferries winter and spring routes.

More complicated codes challenge May and June adventures, when the Department of Transportation will float in a new half to its Hood Canal bridge. Check out clues on TheHoodCanal.com

For a peek under the bridge shell, collect advanced schedules at HoodCanalFerry.com for a truck ferry from Edmonds, a FREE shuttle ferry across the canal, and a beehive of bus schedules. Like the DiVinci Code, the DOT code can be cracked. An important clue to keep in mind is this. The canal is open, even when the bridge is closed. Get Ready!
